PRESIDENTIAL MESSAGE

Dear AAUW members,

As I write this, I realize that this publication is for the year 2009. Wow, time has moved quickly! This year will bring a number of challenges in many areas, and also see some historic changes in our country. I am heartened to know that we, as individuals and as a branch, are supportive of those less fortunate in various ways. It is because of the deep friendships and connections that I have made through my membership in our branch that I chose to take on the responsibilities of president. My wish for all of you and those you hold dear that this year is one of peace and joy, and an ability to handle “the slings and arrows of outrageous fortune” as we move forward.

We share the grief of those who knew Marcia Devoe, an honorary life member, on her passing. We also salute and wish many more happy birthdays to our honorary life member Helen McCaig on the occasion of her 99th birthday. May we all be so agile of mind and spirit as Helen is when we reach her age! And a BIG THANK YOU, to Donna and Dave Gauvreau for sharing their lovely home for our holiday party.

Our program committee has put together a remarkable series of general membership meetings for our edification and enjoyment. Please note the dates and plan to support our hardworking program veeps!

I especially want you to note the exciting Inter-branch Council event we are privileged to host on Saturday, February 21st at The National Steinbeck Center. The CEO, Steve Hoffman, is to be our speaker, and he will be talking about their activities in the educational arena. There might even be an opportunity for us to participate in some of this work—fitting into our organization’s mission perfectly! I encourage all of you to mark this date on your calendar and make every effort to attend.

I look forward to seeing you all at these upcoming events.

Sharyn

PUBLIC POLICY

Where are the New Jobs for Women?

President-elect Barack Obama has promised to create 2.5 million new jobs through infrastructure projects in a new stimulus package. But many critics have spoken out wondering where the jobs for women are going to come from.

Construction workers, who will see the biggest jump from infrastructure projects, are only nine percent women. Engineers will also see a rise in employment opportunities; however women only make up 12 percent of this field. Writing in the NEW YORK TIMES, LINDA Hirshman suggests that Obama should push the stimulus towards human capital projects. Investing in schools, libraries, urban youth programs, and social services would create millions of new jobs for women, where they make up large portions of the demographics. AAUW will be working in coalition with other women's groups to ensure that the concerns of women, especially poor women, are represented in this economic downturn.

In addition to creating more jobs in traditionally female fields, AAUW supports promoting and strengthening science, technology, engineering, and mathematics (STEM) education, especially for girls and other under-represented populations. By doing so, more women could be employed in those fields in the future, as future generations of girls become actively involved in traditionally male careers.

These efforts will help increase America's competitiveness by reducing gender barriers that deter women from pursuing academic and career goals in STEM fields. To this end, AAUW will launch a major STEM study with funding from National Science Foundation. The study, which will be funded by a two-year, $249,000 grant from the NSF, will focus on the causes and dynamics behind the low participation of women and girls in STEM fields. This is AAUW's fourth grant from NSF.

In Memorial

Marcia Frisbee DeVoe

August 12, 1917 – October 27, 2008

Marcia was a member of AAUW Monterey Peninsula Branch for over fifty years, serving in many offices and as our Monterey Peninsula Branch President for the 1988 – 1989 term. That year our branch had many interests: Books and Antiques, Bridge and Hiking, Networking and Women's Issues, and we ate a lot, as Gourmets, Simi- Gourmets and Out to Lunch and Dinner. In 1991, our branch made Marcia one of our Educational Foundation Named Honorees.

After Marcia's retirement, from forty years of teaching, she gave many hours to the photographing and chronicling of the Cooper-Molera Adobe and its Historic Garden. She shared her slide programs with us and many other organizations. Many of her documents and memorabilia were given to the Monterey State Historic Park and the California Room of the Monterey Library, where our branch archives now reside.
